Introduction

Vexillology is the scientific study of the history, symbolism and usage of flags or, by extension, any interest in flags in general. A person who studies flags is a vexillologist, vexillography is the art of designing flags, one who does so is a vexillographer, and finally, an admirer of flags is a vexillophile.

The Vexillophile's Flag-Spotting Field Guide is a collection of the world's flags, from the banners of world superpowers to those of unrecognized breakaway states. It is intended to serve as both a simple reference guide, as well as checklist for flag-spotting.

The flags of this book are organized according to the purpose they serve. These categories can be found in the table of contents above. Within these categories, flags are rather haphazardly organized, typically by continent, then country, and then alphabetically. An index of words found in this book is located on page 295, and can be used to find flags more efficiently. As only the flag's image and a brief title or description are presented, a working internet connection is strongly recommended to those who would want to further research these flags.

The Guide's contents is sourced from Wikimedia on January 31st, 2017. It should not be considered fully reliable nor at all exhaustive. The cover image is based on the design of the FIAV. All parts of the guide should be considered fully public and open-sourced. Links to PDF uploads of this book can be found on the last page. Please share this book; information wants to be free.

Notes on Flag-Spotting

Flag-spotting is the natural hobby of anyone familiar with vexillology, whether done consciously or not. One of the aims of this guide is to formalize the hobby, as well as to enable simpler recording of flag sightings. The following marks can be written next to the image of a flag to make a record of spottings:

☐ – A square represents that the flag has been seen properly hoisted and actively in use as a symbol for identification.

◻ – An unclosed square represents that the flag has been seen in active use as a symbol for identification, but in some form other than as a flown flag (for example, as a patch, sign, graffiti, etc.)

▲ – An upwards-pointing triangle represents a flag that has been seen in the media, though not actively serving as a symbol for identification (such as in photos or on TV).

▼ – A downwards-pointing triangle represents a flag that has been seen on display in person, though not actively serving as a symbol for identification (such as in museums).

○ – A circle represents a flag that has been seen actively flown on the location (or in the context) that it represents.

☑ – A checked box indicates that all of the flag has been seen in all listed contexts.

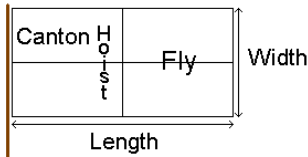

In addition to recording the contexts above, it may be interesting to record the date and location the flag was seen, as well as notes about it. Keeping a running tally of encounters with semi-rare flags may also be interesting.

Flags are created and deprecated constantly, and so the contents of this book is by definition non-exhaustive. Thus, the blank pages (starting at page 254) may be used to record miscellaneous spottings. In addition to being non-exhaustive, though, this book is unnecessarily extensive, and so it is very unlikely that ever one of the 3625 flags in this book will be found in the wild. It is certainly a challenge for even the most expert vexillophile.

Flag-spotting as a hobby is in its infancy. Do what you can to spread the love of flags; share this book with someone!

Glossary of Vexillology

Parts of a Flag

Badge: A coat of arms or simple heraldic symbol.

Canton: Any quarter of a flag, but commonly means the upper hoist (left) quarter.

Charge: A figure or symbol appearing in the field of a flag.

Emblem: A device often used as a charge on a flag.

Field: The background of a flag or the color behind charges.

Fimbriation: A narrow edging or border, often in white or gold, on a flag to separate two other colors.

Fly: The half or edge of a flag farthest away from the flagpole. This term also sometimes refers to the horizontal length of a flag.

Hoist: The half or edge of a flag nearest to the flagpole. This term can also refer to the vertical width of a flag.

Length: The span of a flag along the side at right angles to the flagpole.

Width: The span of a flag down the side parallel to the flagpole.

Types of flag

Banderole or bannerol: A small flag or streamer carried on the lance of a knight; or a long narrow flag flying from the mast-head of a ship.

Banner: Generically, a synonym for a flag of any kind. In heraldry, a flag whose design is the same as the shield in a coat of arms, but in a square or rectangular shape; also known as a banner of arms.

Burgee: A distinguishing flag of a recreational boating organisation.

Civil ensign, merchant flag or merchant ensign: A version of the national flag flown by civil ships to denote nationality.

Civil flag: A version of the national flag flown by civilians on non-government installations or craft.

Colour or color: The flag of a military unit.

Courtesy flag or courtesy

ensign: A flag flown by a visiting ship in foreign waters as a token of respect.

Ensign: The flag of a ship or military unit. May also be used generically as a synonym for a flag of any kind.

Fanion: A small flag used by the French military.

Gonfalon, gonfanon or gonfalone: A type of heraldic flag suspended from a crossbar.

Guidon: A small flag borne by a military unit. In Scots heraldry, a smaller version of the Standard.

Pennon or pennant: A flag larger at hoist than at fly.

Pipe banner: A decorative flag for the Scottish Highland bagpipes.

Prayer flag: A type of flag found strung along mountain ridges and peaks in the Himalayas, used to bless the surrounding countryside.

Rank flag or distinguishing flag: The flag flown by a superior naval officer on his flagship or headquarters.

Signal flag: A flag or pennant used to send signals.

Standard: In heraldry, a long tapering flag bearing heraldic badges and the owner's motto. The term may also refer to a military colour carried by cavalry units; or to a royal standard, a flag used by a monarch or members of a royal family.

State or government flag: A variant of a national flag designated or restricted to use by a country's government or its agencies.

Vexilloid: A flag-like object, used in a similar symbolic manner to a flag, but that differs from a conventional flag in some way.

Vexillum: A flag-like object, suspended from a horizontal crossbar, used as a military standard in the Roman army.

War flag, military flag or battle flag: A variant of a national flag for use by a country's military forces when on land.

Windsock: A conical textile tube used to indicate the direction and strength of the wind.

Flag Display

Distress: Flying the flag upside-down, or tying it into a wheft.

Half-mast: A style of flag display where the flag is flown at least the width of the flag between the top of the flag and the top of the pole.

Flag Identification Symbols

A vexillological symbol is used by vexillologists to indicate certain characteristics of national flags, such as where they are used, who uses them, and what they look like. This set of symbols was devised by Whitney Smith. Some countries use a single flag design to serve as the national flag in all contexts of use; others use multiple flags that serve as the national flag, depending on context (i.e., who is flying the national flag and where). The six basic contexts of use (and potential variants of a national flag) are:

 Civil flag: Flown by citizens on land.

 State flag: Flown on public buildings.

 War flag: Flown on military buildings.

 Civil ensign: Flown on private vessels (fishing craft, cruise ships, yachts, etc.).

 State ensign: Flown on unarmed government vessels.

 Naval ensign: Flown on warships.

In practice, a single design may be associated with multiple such usages; for example, a single design may serve a dual role as  war flag and ensign. Even with such combinations, this framework is not complete: some countries define designs for usage contexts not expressible in this scheme such as air force ensigns (distinct from war flags or war ensigns). Other symbols are used to describe how a flag looks, such as whether it has a different design on each side, or if it is hung vertically, etc. These are the symbols in general use:

 Normal or de jure version of flag, or obverse side

 Design was proposed in the past, but never officially adopted

 Design is a reconstruction, based on past observations

 Reverse side of flag

 Design is an acceptable variant

 Alternative version of flag

 De facto version of flag

 Flag has different designs on its obverse side and its reverse side

 Obverse side meant to be hoisted with pole to the observer's right

 Design officially authorized to represent nation by government of that nation

 Design used in the past, but now abandoned (this symbol is not part of Smith's original set)

 Reverse side is mirror image of obverse side

 Reverse side is congruent to obverse side

 Information on reverse side is not available

 Flag can be hung vertically by hoisting on a normal pole, then turning the pole ninety degrees

 Flag can be hung vertically by rotating the design first

 Vertical hoist method of flag is unknown

 Design has no element which can be rotated

 Flags can only be hoisted vertically

Flag of the FIAV

The constitution of the FIAV formally defines vexillology as "the creation and development of a body of knowledge about flags of all types, their forms and functions, and of scientific theories and principles based on that knowledge." The word is a synthesis of the Latin word vexillum ("flag") and the Greek suffix -logia ("study.") The study of flags, or vexillology, was formalized by the U.S. scholar and student of flags Whitney Smith in 1957. He moved to organize various flag organizations and meetings including the first International Congress of Vexillology, the North American Vexillological Association, and International Federation of Vexillological Associations. The term was conceived in 1958 by Smith. It has historically and appropriately been considered a sub-discipline of heraldry. The International Federation of Vexillological Associations (called FIAV, from its French name Fédération Internationale des Associations Vexillologiques) was provisionally organized on September 3, 1967, at the Second International Congress of Vexillology held in Rüschlikon, Switzerland, and officially created on September 7, 1969, at the Third International Congress of Vexillology. It is presently an international federation of 52 regional, national, and multinational associations and institutions across the globe.
